Kurdish Refugee victim of Saddam Hussein's regime shines in glory in the London Marathon

Shaho, a Kurdish Refugee, takes part in the London Marathon for the first time and will represent Kurdistan in the coming Marathons taking place in Paris, Germany, Switzerland and the United States of America.

The London Marathon

After completing the London Marathon, Shaho came 19th out of 50 contenders. Although somewhat disappointed he said changing the wheels of his wheelchair before the beginning of the race made him go much slower than expected "I could have achieved a finishing time of at least fifteen minutes quicker than what I came out with. But that's okay as this is just a stepping stone in the right direction for me". Shaho was overwhelmed by the support given to him by his friends and to the delight of his fans said "I am definitely improving for the next year's Marathon". Everybody watch out, Shaho is coming.
